Don Carlo is often considered Verdi’s most Wagnerian work. It makes use of the evolving structure of the Musiktheater, made so popular by Wagner, and introduces several motives that can be seen almost as Wagnerian leitmotifs. Verdi creates an entire political world set in Spain during the reign of Philip II. The opera follows four members of the Habsburg family: Philip II, King of all the world, son of an Emperor and ruler of a kingdom that “the sun never sets upon.” Champion of the Catholic faith, devoted ruler and supporter of the Inquisition. This man rules his empire from a small room in the bowels of the Escurial palace. Likened by his enemies to a spider at the center of its web. At the time of the opera he has married three times. His current wife he married in spite of the fact that she had originally been promised to his son, Don Carlo. This marriage is one of the greatest burdens of his life. He does not know how to love. He is fiercely anti-protestant. His presence is felt oppressively in Flanders, a hot-bed of this new and troublesome movement. He has unleashed his armies and the Inquisition upon them.

Elisabetta, Queen of Spain, daughter of Katharina de Medici and the King of France. She has been the pawn in a long political game. In the first act of the five-act version of the opera we see how she falls in love with Don Carlo, Infante of Spain, only to be cruelly given to the father, the actual ruler of Spain at the end of the act. The rest of the opera concerns her misery at the Spanish Court, obliged to be the very correct queen of a very correct monarch, and yet confronted daily by a former suitor whom she must now address as “son.” In a confused world, she is a beacon of light and hope.

Don Carlo, the Infante or Prince of Spain. The son of Philip’s marriage to Maria of Portugal, Don Carlo is hot-tempered and passionate. He is, not as rational: he is emotional. Disillusioned by his failed betrothal to Elisabetta, perturbed by having to call the woman he loves “mother,” Carlo finds a cause in the sufferings of the people of Flanders and takes up their plight only to find himself a prime target of the Inquisition. The opera concerns his redemption. He changes a futile love into the passion of moral politics, barely escaping the twin hammers of Church and State.

Legend states that Charles the 5th, the Habsburg emperor who conquered Flanders for Spain has died and that his ghost haunts the monastery in the Escurial. He is also said to have renounced worldly acts. He abdicated in favor of his son Philip who would never be Emperor but would be King of a realm larger than ever imagined in human history. His tomb is the setting for the first and last acts of Don Carlo: the place where Don Carlo finds his redemption.

These family members are sequestered in the Palace of the Escurial, which legend tells us is like the lair of a large spider. They share this dark realm with some powerful courtiers. These persons all have their own agendas and wait like jackals for the Habsburg lions to feed.

Rodrigo Marquis of Posa. If there is truly a good and honest man in the opera it is Posa. He believes in the future of the Flemish people. Adept at the ways of court, he is a loyal friend to Carlo and Elisabetta and is trusted by the King. He is however feared and envied by the Grand Inquisitor who continually plots his demise.

The Princess Eboli is the female serpent of the palace. Attached to the Queen’s court, she is a spy for the King as well as his mistress. Behind the scenes she agitates for the undoing of the family. She protests that she loves Don Carlo yet swears to expose him when she realizes that he has eyes only for the Queen. After her final betrayal is exposed she changes and desires to help those she has sought to destroy. She is one of Verdi’s most fascinating characters.

The Grand Inquisitor is the center of power for the State and the Church at the same time. He is beyond morality. The Inquisition prosecuted Jews, Moors, and heretics in an attempt to make Spain a pure and true Catholic kingdom. The Inquisitor serves a God who was able to sacrifice his own Son and urges Philip to do the same for a higher purpose.

Don Carlo storms across the stage like the most intense Shakespearian drama. As in Shakespeare’s histories the characters are historical— but they live in a world created through literature. By marrying the plot of Don Carlo to the conventions of the grand opera, Verdi challenged European convention and created a masterpiece based on the struggle of the individual against the unity of Church and State. Don Carlo is redeemed finally, narrowly escaping the Inquisition with the aid of Elisabetta. These star-crossed lovers are deeply aware of their political identities. Don Carlo’s fate raises important questions about our own time.
Sometimes, home is just a feeling.
Take three, last day of shooting. Paris.

The Story of Don Carlo

by Giuseppe Verdi

ACT I. Scene 1.
In the monastery of the Escorial, Don Carlo prays at the tomb of the Emperor Charles V, King Philip’s father, Carlo’s namesake. From the shadows of the cloister, a mysterious monk warns of the vanities of the world. Carlo mourns the loss of his betrothed Elizabeth de Valois to his father who has made her Queen of Spain. His friend Rodrigo, Marquis of Posa appears, newly returned from Flanders where the people suffer under Spanish rule. When Don Carlo admits he is still in love with Elizabetha, Rodrigo urges him to fight for the Flemish cause. The two men pledge undying friendship as King Philip and Queen Elizabetha pass by to pray at the Emperor’s tomb.

Scene 2. In a neighboring garden, Princess Eboli, and the other ladies of the court sing a Moorish song accompanied by Tebaldo. The queen enters the garden. Rodrigo enters to give her a secret letter from Don Carlo, requesting a meeting. Elizabetha agrees to receive him. The ladies and Posa withdraw. Don Carlo enters, petitioning the queen to obtain Philip’s permission for him to leave for Flanders and then suddenly declares his love. Elizabetha breaks free of Don Carlo’s embrace as he runs off. The King enters the garden, finding the queen unattended, he banishes the Countess of Aremberg, who should have been present. Affronted, Elizabetha consoles the banished countess and she and the ladies leave.

The king orders Rodrigo to remain when the others depart, and Rodrigo bravely denounces the situation of Spanish oppression in Flanders. Philip, impressed by Posa’s idealism, chooses him as a royal advisor. Rodrigo accepts the royal confidence, and Philip warns him to beware the Grand Inquisitor.

ACT II. Scene 1. Eboli, who mistakenly believes that Don Carlo loves her, has written a note asking him to meet her secretly. Thinking the note is from the queen, Don Carlo awaits her arrival in the palace gardens. When Eboli enters, disguised, Don Carlo declares his love, but soon both realize their mistake. Eboli accuses Don Carlo of loving the queen. Rodrigo comes upon them, trying to placate Eboli. She runs from the garden swearing to expose Don Carlo and Elizabetha. Rodrigo swears to protect the prince.

Scene 2. In the plaza before the Cathedral of Our Lady of Atocha in Madrid, a crowd waits for King Philip and an auto-da-fé, the ceremony preceding a burning of heretics. Philip emerges from the cathedral with the queen and is greeted by six Flemish deputies, led by Don Carlo. The deputies plead for Flanders. Don Carlo draws his sword on his father, who orders him disarmed. Don Carlo surrenders his sword to Rodrigo and is arrested for treason while Posa is made a duke on the spot. A group of heretics is led to the stake, and a celestial voice promises redemption for lost souls.

ACT III. Scene 1. Philip spends a sleepless night in his study, reflecting on affairs of state and the lack of love in his marriage. He consults with the Grand Inquisitor, who upbraids the king for allowing heretical ideas to creep into Spain. The Inquisitor consents to the death sentence for Don Carlo and insists Posa be handed over to the Inquisition as well. As the ancient priest leaves, Philip wonders if the throne must always yield before the altar.

Elizabetha bursts in, crying that her jewel box has been stolen. Philip hands it to her demanding she open it. When she hesitates, he breaks it open revealing a portrait of Don Carlo. He accuses her of adultery. The queen faints, and Philip calls for aid. Eboli and Posa rush in, Rodrigo expressing amazement that this king who rules half the world cannot govern his own emotions. Posa realizes that it is time to sacrifice himself for Don Carlo and the good of the nation. After the men have left, Eboli confesses that it was she who stole Elizabetha’s jewel case gave it to the King. She then admits that she has been the King’s mistress. Elizabetha banishes Eboli from Spain. The princess laments her fatal beauty and swears to spend her final day in Spain trying to save Don Carlo.

Scene 2. In Don Carlo’s prison, Rodrigo says goodbye to his friend and tells him that Elizabetha will meet him one last time at St. Just. When a shot rings out, Rodrigo falls, mortally wounded. As he dies he urges Don Carlo to save Flanders and be a new light for Spain. Philip enters and returns Don Carlo’s sword, but Don Carlo accuses him of Posa’s murder. The priests storm the prison demanding Don Carlo’s release. The Grand Inquisitor appears and commands the rebellious crowd to kneel in obedience before Philip.

ACT IV. Elizabetha waits for Don Carlo and prays at the Emperor’s tomb. Don Carlo enters and she begs him to continue Rodrigo’s quest for freedom in Flanders. They vow that their love will be rewarded in heaven, but Philip interrupts them, accompanied by agents of the Inquisition. Philip and the Inquisitor think they hear the voice of the dead Emperor, as the mysterious monk appears. drawing Don Carlo into the protective shadows of the cloister.

Tragedy abounds in opera; and Giuseppe Verdi's Don Carlo stands among the finest tragedies of the genre. In it Verdi reached his creative peak as a composer, creating a gripping music drama that resembles no other work of his; and it vividly displays his absolute command of his art. Nor could anything be finer or nobler than this.

Strangely, Don Carlo also leads us to an understanding of Verdi as a man -- his mind, heart, and spirit. And the word "strangely" is appropriate and even quite remarkable, for this composer fiercely guarded his privacy all his life. Still, the opera reveals insights into the way he lived and the beliefs he held.

Verdi: A Man of the Nineteenth Century

Born in 1813, Giuseppe Verdi was the son of tavern keepers who had a small bar and grocery in the country south of Milan. With his musical talent recognized early, he studied with a local priest and was appointed as the paid organist of his parish church when he was only ten. Private lessons in Milan followed, and after them he emerged as an important young composer in 1839, the year his first opera was produced in famed Teatro alla Scala. In 1842 he composed Nabucco, his first big hit. After that, as he said, he never had to look for work again.

The Creation of Don Carlo

Don Carlo was undertaken in 1865, when the Paris Opéra asked Verdi to compose a new work. Choosing Friedrich Schiller's Don Carlos as one source, he also turned to Filippo II, a drama by Vittorio Alfieri, the great Italian playwright and patriot. Verdi certainly knew that play, for he had read Alfieri's works as a teenager and had written a cantata based on one of Alfieri's plays. Not surprisingly, Verdi was also offered a libretto of the story of Philip II and Elisabetta of Valois in 1849. Written by his Venetian librettist and friend, Francesco Maria Piave, this was called Elisabetta di Valois; but Verdi did not use it as a source at that time. In fact, his career took another turn, for in the 1850s he was composing wildly popular works such as Rigoletto, Il Trovatore, and La Traviata.

The world premiere of Don Carlo took place at the Paris Opéra on March 11, 1867; and it was followed by the composer's last operas, Aida, Otello, and Falstaff. In the course of his 87 years he wrote 28 operas, a Requiem Mass, and other compositions; and he died in 1901.

Verdi's Political Career

In 1859 Verdi was seen as a voice for progressive and liberal politics in Italy, so he was elected as a Deputy to the local legislature, the Assembly of the Parma Provinces, and was chosen to meet personally with Victor Emanuel II, the king of Italy, and give him the results of the election that truly launched the unification of that country. Later Verdi was elected to a much more important office as a Deputy to the First Parliament of Italy, and in his later years he was named Senator for Life. Not surprisingly, much of his music is considered within this historical context, and it is no accident that Don Carlo is in part a drama of politics: the conflict between the Church and the State.

Other basic themes of Don Carlo are family strife, grief, patriotism, and loyalty, all of which Verdi understood very well. He composed one opera after another in the 1840s and eventually became a real celebrity of the 1800s.

That was a century critical to all Italians, the years when they finally won independence and created Italy as a nation. In this turbulent time Verdi was twice elected to political office and thus became a national political figure, something that cannot be said of any other composer; so he was truly unique. It is no exaggeration, then, to say that his life-experience made it possible for him to create this opera, a work with a perfect balance of personal and political issues. For all these reasons, then, Don Carlo can not be considered just "entertainment." Instead, it is the most troubling, serious, and profound work imaginable.

Mireille Leitich

BY EVELYN B. LANCE

Mireille Leitich, a dedicated supporter of both opera and symphony, was born in Geneva, Switzerland, one of nine siblings, and, following a year in Italy, came to the United States as a young adult to stay with her sister in Chicago. While working as a laboratory technician at Grant Hospital, she met a young surgeon, John Leitich, married him and moved with him to Hawaii. John died 13 years ago.

Mireille epitomized joie de vivre. She loved people and, while she and John had no children, she said that her many friends were her family so that she never felt alone, even during her final illness. Mireille’s passions were music, French culture, food and wine.

Mireille spoke English, French and Italian fluently as well as some German. She was a long-time board member of the Alliance Francaise Hawaii, and organized the Europa Ball - an event in which all the European clubs in Hawaii participate - each year. She attained Cordon Bleu certificates, was a member of the Chaines des Rotisseurs and gave cooking classes. HOT benefited from her expertise in her donation of a dinner for eight in her gracious home to the Opera Ball silent auction for many years.

She passed away on May 17, 2007. Her presence at the opera will be missed, but she would be happy to know that her generous gift will contribute to the furtherance of HOT’s tradition and the splendor of grand opera in Hawaii.

Why Donate to HOT?

A professional cast of top artists, a full-scale live symphony orchestra, authentic costumes, props and original sets – with the multi-faceted production elements involving hundreds of artists and working crews, opera is the most expensive of the performing arts to produce. A non-profit organization, Hawaii Opera Theatre, is proud to have a strong base of support through ticket sales. However, even with the popularity of our productions, ticket revenues only cover about 40% of the annual operating expenses – a typical challenge for opera companies nationwide. Monetary donations to HOT provide much-needed dollars to close the gap between costs and revenue.

HOT supporters can feel confident in knowing their contribution, a valuable investment in Hawaii’s arts community, is responsibly managed through sound fiscal leadership. HOT has earned a coveted 4-star rating from America’s top non-profit evaluator, Charity Navigator. This award recognizes charities with strong financial stewardship.

Contributions to HOT impact the community in many ways:

Through HOT, children share in the joy of the performing arts experience. HOT’s nationally-recognized education outreach programs reach more than 25,000 students throughout the islands annually.

The professional musicians of the Honolulu Symphony Orchestra are guaranteed contracted performances in the Blaisdell Concert Hall with HOT for up to ten weeks each year. HOT’s Grand Opera and Summer Season productions employ Hawaii’s valuable professional musicians.

Talented local opera artists can embrace their futures. We believe in the cultivation and nurturing of young artists through our Mae Z. Orvis Opera Studio programs. Several studio alumni have grown into professional singers on national and international stages.

The community. HOT supports Hawaii’s economy by utilizing talented local resources – from the carpenters in the scene shop to young singers in the educational outreach programs.

Hawaii’s premier technology company is proud to be able to support worthy causes in the arts, such as Hawaii Opera Theatre. It is programs like these that make us proud to be a locally-owned and operated company.
Legacy Society gifts help to secure the artistic and financial strength of Hawaii Opera Theatre for future generations. If opera has been a part of your life, make it a part of your legacy. Ask your financial advisor about the significant tax benefits of including HOT in your estate plans. HOT staff can also recommend confidential consultation with an estate planning expert who can answer your questions about planned giving.

Opera Legacy Society member benefits include:
- Exclusive Annual Legacy Society Brunch and other special programs and event invitations.
- Recognition, with your approval, in the HOT annual report and in season programs, Aria.

For more information, please contact Karen Tiller, Executive Director of Hawaii Opera Theatre at 596-7372 x11.

HOT’s nationally-recognized educational outreach programs provide valued arts education to Hawaii’s youth, from elementary through high school, reaching students across the state. “More and more, research indicates the study of the arts is crucial in the development of well-rounded students,” said Erik Haines, Director of Education for HOT. “We give schools an effective approach to keeping the arts in their lesson plans with our turn-key programs designed to augment core curricula.”

HOT Opera Express

This touring program, featuring local artists and live musical accompaniment, brings opera to schools and community centers. The 2008 program is an adaptation of The Barber of Seville. Opera Express reaches 25,000 youngsters throughout the year and gives promising local singers valuable performance opportunities. Teachers and administrators on all islands have expressed appreciation to HOT for bringing its specially-tailored opera production to students who have limited opportunity to experience live theatre.

Opera For Everyone

HOT’s signature educational program, Opera For Everyone, attracts up to 6,000 middle school and high school students to the Blaisdell Concert Hall each year to experience a full-scale opera for just $6. Underwritten by generous sponsors, grants and other charitable support, this program continues to grow in popularity each year. It provides older children the chance to participate in the HOT Grand Opera Season through an exclusive student-only audience prior to Opening Night performances. HOT’s education staff works with Department of Education teachers to make the opera experience relevant to classroom curricula. HOT provides complete study guides, videos and other instructional materials to participating schools.

Mini-Residency Program

This six-month program enables professionals from the Hawaii Opera Theatre to work on-site with students, teachers and administrators at select elementary schools to produce a mini-opera. This program encourages intra-school cooperation, team teaching, curriculum enhancement and parental involvement. The program culminates in the school’s opera performances. Acting, singing, producing, ushering, publicity, budgets, costumes and backstage crew duties are handled by students. Students and HOT professionals share the stage.

HOT’s Mae Z. Orvis Opera Studio

In addition to school programs, HOT also offers professional development for young artists pursuing careers in opera. Its competitive Mae Z. Orvis Opera Studio program has provided a strong foundation for opera artists who perform across the country. This March, Quinn Kelsey, an alumnus, makes his New York Metropolitan Opera stage debut.

Would you like to bring a HOT program to your neighborhood school? You can sponsor a full-day of programs for an entire elementary or middle school for just $325! Bring the joy of live theatre to your community. Call HOT for more information about the tour program and other HOT education opportunities.

Introducing the most advanced luxury automobile ever made.

The 2008 Lexus LS Hybrid.
It would lead its class, if one existed. The LS Hybrid is the world’s first luxury V8 hybrid. It pairs remarkable power with extraordinarily intelligent engineering. The LS Lexus Hybrid Drive System features a 5.0-liter hybrid V8 engine that produces 438 total system horsepower. Still, the LS Hybrid is certified as a Super Ultra-Low Emission Vehicle (SULEV). The more you know about Lexus Hybrids, the more you’ll appreciate how elegance and eco-living can coexist beautifully.
The LS Hybrid truly is power without compromise; indulgence without guilt. Experience the 2008 LS Hybrid, only at Servco Lexus.
