during the first performances of Il trovatore in Rome in 1852, Verdi began hastily composing his next opera only two months before its scheduled premiere. His favorite soprano, Rosina Penco, was unavailable to play the leading role, and his choice for bass was...
Kāhala Nui’s active lifestyle appeals to Hawaii’s independent seniors, 62 and older. Life Care, a lifestyle and health care program, is designed to promote mental, intellectual, physical, and spiritual wellness throughout life. Life Care members have the freedom to live as they choose, engaging in various interests, refining talents, pursuing ideas, and forging new friendships. This freedom comes with the security of a 90% refundable deposit and the peace of mind knowing that the finest quality care, if ever needed, will be provided on the same campus. This is what successful senior living is all about.
We know that she was a wonderful and impressive woman. We know that her companions included the authors Dumas the father, and Dumas the son, and many other leading figures of her day in 19th century Paris. We know that she ended tragically. We do not really know what she looked like though we have been tempted to imagine her looking like Greta Garbo, or Lillian Gish, or Teresa Stratas. There are portraits which give an inkling of how she must have appeared in her day, but we largely ignore those.

We know that she loved the theatre and loved camellias, the flowers. Dumas gave her that name in his thinly fictionalized account of the story: The Lady of the Camellias or Camille. We know that she inspired women of her day to rivalry. She was a fashion leader and a celebrity. I am sure that she encouraged envy among her peers and left a trail of men behind her to burnish a reputation that was already flaming.

She is every woman who has ever given up anything for a man or otherwise. She cannot escape... neither can anyone else.

Out of Marguerite Gautier – the impressive leader of the demi-monde – comes the Lost One of Verdi’s opera La Traviata. Doom is everywhere in this opera. Violetta Valéry is a courtesan of the first rank but is left to her own devices by the glittering life which she has led when she falls ill. Her downfall comes because she actually does fall in love, something a woman of her station should never aspire to in the eyes of society, certainly not in the eyes of her peers. She is surrounded by a fascinating rogue’s gallery that stands in for society as a whole.

And what of the other women who are like her? La Traviata is their story too. What of Annina’s fierce loyalty? What does Flora feel about her colleague taking a much younger lover and enjoying herself in the country while others of her kind are left to comb the wintery demi-monde of the big city called Paris? Can a woman live this way?

And the men? What of the young and fairly naïve Alfredo who does not realize that he is being kept and that the bubble of love he attempts to create around Violetta is only possible because she is willing to finance it. What of the men like Baron Douphol who have provided funds and protection throughout the years to watch their pampered darling squander it on a mere boy? And of course, what of Alfredo’s father, the solid and somewhat terrifying Germont? Never mind who he was in reality. This father is the representative of an older virtue, a virtue that sees through the life that Violetta has led and will not forgive her for it. He is honest. She respects his honesty. She sees it herself. She is nothing. The future is everything and the reputation of her young lover needs to be preserved at all costs.

We all know how the story ends. The young lover leaves. Violetta is dragged through the figurative mud of Paris. Father and young lover return to tell the dying courtesan that she has a heart of gold. As if that would do any good at her deathbed. It does provide some comfort. Her sacrifice has not gone unnoticed. She is forsaken by everything, only her “good deeds” remain. Like the medieval Everyman, she is everywoman who has ever given up anything for a man or otherwise. She cannot escape... and neither can anyone else.

La Traviata is the story of one lost in our midst. It is a myth in the clothes of centuries past: a myth as strong and as potent as that of the ancient Greeks. It is fantasy and reality at the same time. It is our story and a story of long ago. A story that could be set in our present age. It is our story. The story of mortal humans facing fate.
An opera season filled with tragedy, farce, love, and beauty is one to remember. orangeroc has been proud to have been a part of creating the promotions for Hawaii Opera Theatre. We look forward to next year’s productions!

GIUSEPPE VERDI

ACT I
In her Paris salon, the courtesan Violetta Valéry greets party guests, including Flora Bervoix, the Marquis d’Obigny, Baron Douphol, and Gastone, who introduces a new admirer, Alfredo Germont. This young man, having adored Violetta from afar, joins her in a drinking song (Brindisi: “Libiamo”). An orchestra is heard in the next room, but as guests move there to dance, Violetta suffers a fainting spell, sends the guests on ahead, and goes to her parlor to recover. Alfredo comes in, and since they are alone, confesses his love (“Un di felice”). At first Violetta protests that love means nothing to her. Something about the young man’s sincerity touches her, however, and she promises to meet him the next day. After the guests have gone, Violetta wonders if Alfredo could actually be the man she could love (“Ah, fors’è lui”). But she decides she wants freedom (“Sempre libera”), though Alfredo’s voice, heard outside, argues in favor of romance.

ACT II
Some months later Alfredo and Violetta are living in a country house near Paris, where he praises their contentment (“De’ miei bollenti spiri”). But when the maid, Annina, reveals that Violetta has pawned her jewels to keep the house, Alfredo leaves for the city to settle matters at his own cost. Violetta comes looking for him and finds an invitation from Flora to a party that night. Violetta has no intention of going back to her old life, but trouble intrudes with the appearance of Alfredo’s father. Though impressed by Violetta’s ladylike manners, he demands she renounce his son: the scandal of Alfredo’s affair with her has threatened his daughter’s engagement (“Pura siccome un angelo”). Violetta says she cannot, but Germont eventually convinces her (“Dite alla giovine”). Alone, the desolate woman sends a message of acceptance to Flora and begins a farewell note to Alfredo. He enters suddenly, surprising her, and she can barely control herself as she reminds him of how deeply she loves him (“Amami, Alfredo”) before rushing out. Now a servant hands Alfredo her farewell note as Germont returns to console his son with reminders of family life in Provence (“Di Provenza”). But Alfredo, seeing Flora’s invitation, suspects Violetta has thrown him over for another lover. Furious, he determines to confront her at the party.

At her soirée that evening, Flora learns from the Marquis that Violetta and Alfredo have parted, then clears the floor for party games. Soon Alfredo strides in, making bitter comments about love and gambling recklessly at cards. Violetta arrives with Baron Douphol, who challenges Alfredo to a game and loses a small fortune to him. Everyone goes in to supper, but Violetta has asked Alfredo to see her. Fearful of the Baron’s anger, she wants Alfredo to leave, but he misunderstands her apprehension and demands that she admit she loves Douphol. Crushed, she pretends she does. Now Alfredo calls in the others, denounces his former love and hurls his winnings at her feet (“Questa donna conoscete?”). Germont enters in time to see this and denounces his son’s behavior. The guests rebuke Alfredo and Douphol challenges him to a duel.

ACT III
In Violetta’s bedroom six months later, Dr. Grenvil tells Annina her mistress has not long to live: tuberculosis has claimed her. Alone, Violetta rereads a letter from Germont saying the Baron was only wounded in his duel with Alfredo, who knows all and is on his way to beg her pardon. But Violetta senses it is too late (“Addio del passato”). Paris is celebrating Mardi Gras and, after revelers pass outside, Annina rushes in to announce Alfredo. The lovers ecstatically plan to leave Paris forever (“Parigi, o cara”). Germont enters with the doctor before Violetta is seized with a last resurgence of strength. Feeling life return, she staggers and falls dead at her lover’s feet. Courtesy of OPERA NEWS Edited by: Henry G. Akina

FROM TRAVESTY TO TRIUMPH

During the first performances of Il Trovatore in Rome in 1852, Verdi began hastily composing his next opera only two months before its scheduled premiere. His favorite soprano, Rosina Penco, was unavailable to play the leading role, and his choice for bass was insulted at the part he was being offered. He heightened the risk by selecting a subject set in modern times, stating that, “Others would not have done it because of the conventions, the epoch and for a thousand other stupid scruples,” making clear his intentions to be uncompromising. As one can imagine, La Traviata, the story of one woman’s tragic struggle with love and death, was considered “the most celebrated fiasco of Verdi’s later career.” Since those days, however, the opera has been called “the most profound personal tragedy that the medium has ever produced.” It has been touted as “the most touchingly-intimate opera in the [Met’s] repertory.”

Audiences continue to proclaim a universal love for the woman who broke the rules when her composer could not.

How Can a Work with Such Disastrous Beginnings Become so Highly Revered?

The premiere of La Traviata at the Teatro la Fenice in 1853 was nothing short of a catastrophe, and Verdi wrote several letters suggesting that the singers were to blame. For one thing, the tenor in the role of Germont became ill just before opening night but sang the part anyway with a feeble voice. The bass, Felice Varesi, had created the roles of both Rigoletto and Macbeth but was considered to be past his vocal prime and acted insulted at playing a supporting role. Regarding the character of Violetta, Verdi had doubts about the choice of Fanny Salvini-Donatelli. According to his contract, however, the deadline had passed for him to recast any of the characters, so he was forced to keep the cast list unchanged. Before the first performance, the composer received an anonymous letter, stating that the opera was destined for doom unless he replaced the soprano and the bass. It was too late by then, however, and the opera that had been quickly written over the course of two months had to go on.

During the first performance, the audience was so disinterested in the struggles of Violetta and her illness that they laughed out loud when she (a large woman) sang that she was “wasting away” from consumption. Critics agreed that the singers were incapable; one even reviewed the orchestra and then refused to address the rest, stating that he would only do so when the music was better sung. The censors were displeased with the setting, which they felt celebrated the immoral indulgences of courtesans. Verdi remained optimistic about these reactions, however, and wrote in a letter, “For my part, the final word on Traviata was not spoken last night. They will see it again, and we shall see!”

Obeying the demands of the censors, Verdi reworked the score and libretto so that the story took place in... the 17th century and changed the title from “Love and Death” to “The Fallen Woman,” reflecting the moral stance of the authorities on the subject matter. The composer also completely recast the production and reworked the duet between Violetta and Germont at the end of act two. The second time around, in 1854, the opera was a huge success, proving true Verdi’s words about the capabilities of the work and what the right casting can achieve. “Then it was a fiasco; now it is creating a furore. Draw your own conclusions!” he exclaimed.

Like that other famous love tragedy, Roméo and Juliet, the universal story of La Traviata has inspired contemporary versions of the production. Yet, audiences throughout the years have felt a fondness for the character of Violetta that supersedes any issues regarding setting. Her dominance within the work may be why the composer planned only one set for the entire opera, as if not to overshadow the woman the work is about. As stated in the program notes for a Metropolitan Opera production, “Our attention will focus on the woman who has been entrusted to the role that is the ultimate test of the lyric/dramatic soprano voice in the Italian repertory. Violetta... simply towers above any production of the opera itself.”

Such a demanding role requires the kind of vocal and acting strength that has made heroes out of those who have succeeded beyond expectations, such as Maria Callas and her “legendary” performance of Violetta at Teatro alla Scala in 1955. Not only must the vocalist sing through three acts of demanding music, but she must also show the deterioration of the character’s health dramatically and vocally, ending with the finale in which she collapses and dies in the arms of her lover. When one thinks of Ms. Salvini-Donatello’s audience and the opera’s original critics, it becomes clear why the role is one of the most intimidating to even the most accomplished sopranos. Even so, audiences continue to proclaim a universal love for the woman who broke the rules when her composer could not.

BRAVO!

HOT BRAVO! EVENT: October 2010

BRAVO! is the newly formed group of hip, young patrons of Hawaii Opera Theatre. Over 100 individuals joined HOT and Nordstrom at the newly opened Waikiki Edition for the BRAVO! kick-off. This inaugural event featured fall fashions from Nordstrom collections, arias from the opera repertoire, and the incredible views from Sun Suite. Kristen Chan, HOT Board Member, and HOT patron, Ray Galas, co-chaired the event.

FAUST DRESS REHEARSAL: January 2011

A Season for Opera

Incredible scenes from the 2011 season's premiere opera, Faust, which was performed on January 28, 30 and February 1.

Lucia di Lammermoor was performed on February 11, 13, and 15.
Hawaii Opera Theatre takes great pride in the efforts it makes to introduce young people to opera, provide training for singers and to create learning opportunities for all ages. Last year, HOT’s Education team gave or coordinated over 116 performances and another 170 demonstrations, lectures and hands-on work with students and teachers.

HOT Opera Express
The touring arm of the company develops operatic shows for young people which are performed in school cafeterias or other suitable spaces on campus. The shows feature singers from the Mae Z. Orvis Opera Studio of Hawaii Opera Theatre and include opportunities for the audience to sing. Typically 50 to 80 performances are given annually.

HOT Residency
This award-winning program turns a class, grade level or even a whole school into an opera production company. With assistance from the professionals at HOT, schools have developed their own opera or produced adaptations of famous operas and operettas. In the past year students at Aina Haina Elementary, Waikiki Elementary and Niu Valley Middle School have all participated in this program.

Opera For Everyone
The final dress rehearsal of every opera is reserved for education purposes and each year educators bring thousands of students to experience live opera.

Singer Training
Mae Z. Orvis Opera Studio
Each year local singers audition to become members of the Mae Z. Orvis Opera Studio of Hawaii Opera Theatre. The Studio offers singers opportunities to work with the opera professionals on the HOT staff as well as singers, coaches and other industry professionals to further their development as singers.

Learning Opportunities
Opera Highlights
Dr. Lesley Wright leads this insightful class which provides two in-depth discussions on each of HOT’s productions. Members of the class are also invited to a staging rehearsal of one opera. This class is offered as part of the non-credit programs through the University of Hawaii at Mānoa’s Outreach College.

Opera Previews
Opera Previews at the Honolulu Academy of Arts are a long-time tradition. The lectures are open to the public for a small fee but are free to all HOT and Academy members. This year’s lecturers include Dr. Lesley Wright and Judy Neale.

Lanai Lectures
At one hour prior and thirty-minutes prior to each opera performance at the Neal Blaisdell Concert Hall a lecture is given on the Ward Avenue Lanai. The lectures are free and a great way to get informed and have a place to relax before the performance begins.

Act II
Fashions for you and your home get a second chance!

Let your former fashions, for you and your home, live again! Hawaii Opera Theatre’s ACT II returns this Spring. The secondhand sales event is accepting donations of men’s and women’s gently-used and new clothing (clean and on hangers please!), home decor, artwork and housewares. Accessories and jewelry are also welcome donations. Watch for more details about the event date, time and place! Meanwhile, give your old favorites a second chance! To donate, or for more information, call Nikki Nielsen at (808) 596-7372 ext. 203.

28 HAWAII OPERA THEATRE | ARIA
A NEW VISION FOR A BELOVED CLASSIC.

A classic love story told in a more intimate way…

A magnificent story of love told against the backdrop of war and slavery. This retelling of the AIDA story holds the chorus in a fixed place, without Egyptian costumes, to focus on the core of the work as an intimate and tragic story of star-crossed lovers. They become a Greek chorus: witnesses to the tragic love of Aida for Radames, and the seething jealousy of the princess Amneris. The passion of the work transcends the borders of time, class and society.
